African Women's Development Fund (AWDF)

Background:

The AWDF, established in 2000, is the first Africa-wide fundraising and grant-making fund, which aims to support the work of organisations working to promote women's empowerment in Africa.

Description:

To support the African Women's Movement through grant-making and technical assistance; to invest in the efforts of African women who are engaged in innovative efforts to develop their communities; to increase the amount of resources available to women's organisations and women's projects in Africa; to strengthen the capacity and infrastructure of women's organisations; to advocate with other donors and policy makers, for resources for African women; to establish alliances and build relationships with other grant-making institutions within and outside Africa, individual donors and organisations committed to promoting and protecting women's rights.

The AWDF prioritises programs, which develop and promote women's leadership and advocacy across all wide range of themes (poverty reduction, income generating activities & economic empowerment, environmental education, women's human rights; education & vocational training, health, population issues, political participation, peace building, appropriate technology).

Financial information:

Budget 2004/2005: US$ 519,369 and 728,128 respectively. Small grants range from US$ 500 to US$ 2,500.

A.J. Muste Memorial Institute: International Non-violence Training Fund (INTF) & NOVA Fund

Background:

The A.J. Muste Memorial Institute has, as part of its program work, the funding of projects that promote the principles and practice of non-violent social change.

The Institute provides direct grants to a particular project or organization.

The Muste Institute also administers several special funds, including the International Nonviolence Training Fund (INTF) and Sheilah's Fund East, renamed in 2006 as the NOVA Fund.

Grant programs:

Direct Grants:

The Institute makes direct grants for projects which promote the principles and practice of non-violent social change, and which speak to the issues to which A.J. Muste dedicated his life: peace and disarmament; social and economic justice; racial and sexual equality; and the labour movement. From its regular grant program, the Institute makes about 20 to 30 grants annually to international, national and local projects in the US and around the world, giving priority to those with small budgets and little chance of funding from more traditional sources. There are no geographical restrictions. The maximum grant amount is $2,000. The Institute funds projects which seek to advance non-violent grassroots education and action for social and economic justice. The Institute does not make grants for general support of ongoing operations.

INTF grants:

The Fund offers small grants to projects, which seek to build training capacity and leadership development for non-violent social change. Non-violence trainings seek to help people develop and improve the skills they need to confront systemic injustice through organized, principled, non-violent action. Trainings promote the exchange of ideas, information, and strategies, through which activists can become more effective at using non-violent action in their struggles. Groups applying for funding must be small, community-based and with little likelihood of funding from other grant making institutions. Projects eligible for support include those which build capacity and leadership among people engaged in non-violent struggles; those which prepare participants for specific non-violent actions or campaigns; and those geared to "training the trainers," in order to expand and multiply non-violence training throughout a targeted community. Preference is given to those projects, which involve trainers from the local area or region, where such trainers are available.

NOVA Fund grants:

The NOVA Fund supports active non-violence work. Grants are made on the recommendation of a fund advisor. Unsolicited applications are not generally considered.

Geographical focus:

Direct grants are issued to international, national and local projects in the U.S. and around the world. The INTF supports non-violence training projects outside the United States, and within Native nations in the U.S. The NOVA Fund primarily funds projects in Latin America.

Financial information:

Direct grants of up to US$ 2,000 are issued to a particular project or organization. The INTF small grants range between US$ 500 and US$ 3,000. NOVA Fund grants range from US$ 1,000 to US$ 10,000.

Allachy Fund for Livelihoods from Wild Plants (AFLWP)

Background:

The Allachy Fund for Livelihoods from Wild Plants (a.k.a. Allachy Awards for community-based Conservation of medicinal plants) has been established to provide small grants for capacity building in community-based plant conservation of medicinal plants in developing countries. The Fund is administered by Plantlife International as part of its Medicinal Plants Conservation Initiative whose aim it is to build capacity for the conservation and sustainable use of medicinal plants.

Description:

The Allachy Awards for community-based Conservation of medicinal plants are to build capacity for the conservation and sustainable use of medicinal plants. Projects should be concerned with community-based approaches and designed to contribute systematically to the building of national or regional capacity.

Evidence should be provided that the matters being addressed have been identified as conservation priorities through cross-sectoral consultation, or alternatively that such consultation will form part of the project. The outputs of projects should include contributions to toolkits of information, which Plantlife can use more widely under the Medicinal Plants Conservation Initiative to create awareness, share lessons and serve as resources for capacity-building.

Applicants should be organisations that can demonstrate a long-term commitment to plant conservation. Applications during an initial phase of the award scheme (to December 2006) will normally be assessed in batches at 3-month intervals (31 December 2005, 31 March 2006, etc.). Thereafter, procedures may be revised. Awards can be for periods of up to 3 years.

Financial information:

The maximum size of award is £ 10,000.

Geographical focus:

Applications are welcome from all regions, but synergy between applications will be considered in deciding which projects to support, as well as the potential to use the awards to build more substantial proposals. Applications are especially welcome from East Africa and the Himalayas.

Australian Relief & Mercy Services Ltd. (ARMS)

Background:

Australian Relief & Mercy Services is the mercy ministry arm of Youth With A Mission Australia. ARMS is a registered Australian Charity (since 1988). The purpose of ARMS is reaching out to the poor and the needy of the world wherever they may be found. ARMS runs projects in Australia and overseas.

Description:

ARMS fundraises for, and gives financial assistance to and initiates projects amongst the poor. ARMS also provides emergency aid, in the form of small cash grants and the provision of personnel and resources to disaster and emergency situations. ARMS provides support and a limited number of small grants to projects outside of Australia that are serving the poor and needy.

In order to this ARMS firstly ascertains that each project is bona fide and works with the project leader in order to try and define the needs of the project that ARMS will be able to assist with. ARMS then fund raises on behalf of that project making its needs known to a wide range of perspective donors, moneys are collected and the funding of the project commences.

CANARI (Caribbean Natural Resources Institute)

Background:

CANARI is an independent technical and research organisation, which analyses and promotes the participatory management of natural resources in the islands of the Caribbean. CANARI seeks to create avenues for the equitable participation and effective collaboration of Caribbean communities and institutions in managing the use of natural resources critical to development

At the core of the Institute's philosophy and vision is that the participation of all parties concerned with natural resources and their use is essential for development that is equitable and sustainable. CANARI's programme, which spans the entire insular Caribbean, comprises three main elements - research, analysis and advocacy on the methods and institutions required for participatory management. Themes include: approaches to protected area management; capacity building for participatory management; collaborative natural resource monitoring; and, locating livelihood strategies in natural resource management.

Description:

Capacity Building and Technical Assistance for Participatory Management: CANARI actively stimulates and supports local, national, and regional initiatives that foster stakeholder participation in resource management. One of the ways in which this has been done is through technical assistance, which includes advice on programme design and implementation and an associated small grant scheme.

Earth Preservation Fund (EPF)

Background:

The non-profit EPF was founded in 1978 by the travel organisation JOURNEYS. This organisation has accepted a responsibility to preserve the resources we enjoy and over the years has supported numerous projects and ongoing programs. EPF was the first wholly traveller-funded conservation organization in the United States.

The Earth Preservation Fund works to preserve local cultures and natural habitats around the globe.

Description:

All EPF supported projects are small-scale and community initiated. The EPF looks to support smaller projects where a small contribution can make a significant difference. All activities of EPF are guided by its code of ethics: Adapt and fit-in with the local culture; act directly to accomplish conservation; support sustainable businesses; and embrace diversity.

Financial information:

Small grants of up to US$ 500.

Environment Equity and Justice Partnership (EEJP)

Background:

EEJP is an initiative of the Just Environment Charitable Trust set up in 2004 with the aim of helping groups and individuals foster lasting improvement in the area of environmental justice by catalysing grassroots initiatives, triggering new imagination and perspectives, encouraging crossover linkages and providing greater opportunities to connect to the environmental thinking.

EEJP pursues the mission of strengthening environmental justice movement by supporting research, environmental advocacy, policy development, dissemination, education and training, and practice.

Description:

The Environmental Small Grants allows the EEJP program to assist worthy grassroots organisations engaged in environmental work through support of small projects that are of special importance to those applicants and their communities. The focus is on supporting organizations that identify and work on the root causes of problems and that approach issues with a commitment to long-term change. The programs should have a clear agenda for change and a strategic plan for achieving the organization's goals.

The priority is given to groups that:

- are new and emerging but possess a great potential to strengthen the environmental movement in their areas/communities;
- are working on challenging issues that are yet are critical to the realization of environment justice;
- are geographically located in a region that has limited access to funding resources;

- actively seek to include the perspectives of those served by or benefiting from its activities;
- are planning to take up activities that would be significantly enhanced by small grants.

Financial information:

Budget 2004/2005 US$ 61,000. Small grants range up to US$ 5,500

Front Line

Background:

Front Line was founded in 2001 with the specific aim of protecting Human Rights Defenders, people who work, non-violently, for any or all of the rights enshrined in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. Front Line's main focus is on those human rights defenders at risk, either temporarily or permanently because of their work on behalf of their fellow citizens. Front Line aims to address some of the needs identified by defenders themselves, including protection, networking, training and access to the thematic and country mechanisms of the UN and other regional bodies.

Description:

Front Line operates a small grants program to Human Rights Defenders around the world. Grants are given to organisations working for human rights as well as to individual human rights defenders at risk. Grants are given for the specific purpose of strengthening the protection of human rights defenders.

Fund for Global Human Rights (FGHR)

Background:

The Fund for Global Human Rights, established in 2002, is founded on the belief that securing basic freedoms worldwide requires effective, frontline organizations challenging abuse wherever it occurs. Thus the Fund for Global Human Rights works to ensure a strong, effective human rights community worldwide.

Description:

The Fund raises and distributes resources to human rights organizations in places with great need and minimal access to funding. The Fund is seeing human rights activism through to its next phase, where human rights groups around the world amass the skills, experience and financial resources to establish themselves as a countervailing force to abusive actors.

The Fund's purpose is to support local, national, and regional human rights groups and networks abroad in becoming stronger, more effective, and better funded. To accomplish this, the Fund focuses in five regions and has identified specific regional strategies designed to make the most impact with limited funds and resources.

Financial information:
Budget 2005: US$ $2.2 million respectively. Grants range between US$ 5,000 and US$ 30,000.

Geographical focus:

The Fund will make grants in 2006 in a particular set of countries. The current Request for Proposals (Fall 2006) is for groups based and working on the human rights situations in Bangladesh, Pakistan, India, Morocco, Tunisia, or Algeria only. For groups based in Sierra Leone, Liberia, Guinea, Democratic Republic of Congo, Uganda, Mexico, or Guatemala, a separate Request for Proposals will be available in late 2006. The Fund will not consider proposals from organizations in any other countries at this time.

Gaia Foundation - Microprojects Fund

Background:
The Gaia Foundation, founded in 1985, is committed to cultural and biological diversity, and a living Earth democracy. Through a network of Associates, advisors and partner organisations, Gaia works at all levels; from the grassroots with peasant farmers and indigenous communities, through to the regional and international level with policy-makers and governments.

Description:
The Microprojects Fund supports initiatives that evolve the African Biodiversity Network (ABN) programme aims and objectives. Gaia is a founding member of the ABN. It is through the structure of the ABN that the small grants fund is allocated. Gaia is responsible for overseeing the management of the fund, but ABN thematic coordinators (field officers) based in-country, are responsible for working with national organisations to identify initiatives and provide follow up. Other founding ABN partners play an important advisory role, but the decision-making is a collective process between ABN thematic coordinators, and the ABN Steering Group of which Gaia is a partner.

Objectives with providing small grants:

1. To support civil society groups to raise awareness about the importance of biodiversity, the causes behind its destruction, and develop or strengthen initiatives for sustainable biodiversity based alternatives, with a special focus on Africa in the global context.
2. Provide a direct rapid response seed funding and support processes for innovative activities of civil society groups in the main African Biodiversity Network countries (i.e. Kenya, South

- Africa, Ethiopia, Ghana, Tanzania, Zambia, Benin and Uganda).
3. Strengthen inter and intra-regional communication, networking and capacity building through support to specific networking and nodes.
 4. Strengthen advocacy and policy activities in order to gain legal recognition and protection of ecosystems and communities at the national, regional and international levels.

Geographical focus:
Mainly Africa.

Global Greengrants Fund (GGF)

Background:

The mission of the Fund is to help protect the global environment by strengthening the grassroots environmental movement in developing countries with small grants. The GGF aims to bridge the gap between those who can offer financial support and grassroots groups in developing countries that can make effective use of that support. The GGF helps donors overcome the barriers to grassroots grant making by identifying worthy organizations and moving funds at minimal cost.

The Fund is like is an incubator of grassroots initiatives. Financial support is provided and, through the advisor network, connection is given to a global community of people with scientific expertise, political savvy and access to sources of further funding.

Description:

The GGF supports a wide range of community-based initiatives that protect the environment in the most underserved and threatened regions on Earth. The purpose of GGF is to strengthen organizational infrastructure and networking capability with grants for those essential expenses that allow organizations to do their work.

The Fund focuses on a vast array of development and environment issues. Priorities include environmental education and awareness raising, capacity strengthening and institutional support, also regarding campaigns, meetings, monitoring and policy issues.

Remarks:

To find grantees GGF relies on nearly 100 volunteer advisors around the world. Linked in a network of regional and global advisory boards, these volunteers allow the Fund to capitalize on the expertise of people who know first hand where the most urgent and promising work is happening. GGF does not accept unsolicited grant proposals or applications. If you have a project that you believe might be of interest to the GGF you have to consult the list of advisors, see: <http://www.greengrants.org/advisors.all.html>

Green Coast Small Grant Facility

Background:
The Green Coast project was developed by Both ENDS, IUCN Netherlands, Wetlands International, and WWF Netherlands for the areas affected by the tsunami of 2004. Its first aim is to restore the livelihoods of local communities. Coastal ecosystems play an important role in providing them with safety and sources of income. Green Coast supports community-based projects to help people restore their livelihoods and rehabilitate coastal nature. At the end of September 2006, 154 projects have been approved and many have already started operations or are even completed!

Description:
The programme's main goal is to support projects that promote the restoration of coastal ecosystems and ecologically sustainable reconstruction efforts. Objectives include:

1. Restoration of ecosystems in order to restore /reinforce the services they provide in terms of support to

- livelihoods and safety, and biodiversity conservation;
2. Sustainability of reconstruction (of ecosystems): to make sure reconstruction efforts are ecologically and socio-economically sustainable; and
 3. to make sure local communities have a say in the way reconstruction efforts are done.

GTI Active Partners Small Grants Programme

Background:
The Global Transparency Initiative (GTI) is a network of civil society organisations promoting openness in the International Financial Institutions, such as the World Bank, the IMF, the European Investment Bank and Regional Development Banks. The GTI believes the people have a right to information from public institutions and a right to participate in the development policies and projects that affect their lives. In IFI-supported activities, transparency can help reduce corruption; identify potential social, environmental and economic risks and benefits; and avoid damaging communities and sensitive ecosystems.

Description:

The GTI offers small grants for the following types of activities:

- Case studies/Audits: Small grants of US $ 500 to US $ 3,000 will be made to research and write case studies about the negative consequences of a lack of transparency by IFIs or the positive effects of transparency by such institutions, in specific instances. These case studies are intended to supplement the policy debate by providing real world examples. Some priority will be given to high profile subjects. Emerging or ongoing situations are eligible. Thorough research and precise descriptions will be required. Bringing a situation to life with interviews and personal stories is advisable. This grant will be available to cover staff costs as well as the production and distribution of the individual case studies. (Proposals for case studies/audits must also include a writing sample of approximately 200 words).
- Advocacy: Small grants, up to US $5,000, will be available for key advocacy activities which are congruent with the program goals of the GTI and promote accountability of IFIs, greater public participation in policy making and access to IFI information. The GTI seeks to improve the transparency of IFI's by influencing the disclosure policies and standards of these institutions. This grant is available to individuals and civil society organizations, from developing countries in particular, who are involved in precedent setting transparency issues within the context of specific campaigns.
- Translations: Small grants, up to US $1,000, will be made to translate case studies, transparency audits and other relevant documents produced by civil society that discuss issues dealing with transparency within a country context or within the operations of the international financial institutions (IFIs). This grant is available to members of civil society who produce timely analytical pieces on transparency at the IFIs or on national freedom to information legislation. Individuals or organizations can apply to this fund to request the translation of their product(s) into one or more languages. Grants for translations can be done in conjunction with the production of a GTI-funded case study or audit. Grants from this fund are also available for civil society correspondence and interpretation at meetings around transparency issues.

Remarks:

Organisations and individuals already involved in IFI transparency issues and interested in playing an active role in the GTI are eligible to apply.

Harambee Small Grants Facility

Background:

The Harambee Project, conceived by the Association for Progressive Communications, Bellanet and the United Nations Economic Commission for Africa, and funded by Connectivity Africa and Hivos, is designed to support increased capacity among a range of Africa-based networks and communities to coordinate and facilitate the interactions of their respective constituencies.

The aim of the Harambee small grants fund is to provide a mechanism to supply immediate funding for capacity development and innovation in sectors with existing networks pursuing ongoing activities. This fund provides an opportunity for support to a number of sectoral based networks and communities (in, for example, health, education, agriculture, etc.) – and to those with the capability to facilitate knowledge sharing, communication and participation of those networks and communities in a variety of fora – and in so doing will help to enhance awareness of, and expertise in, processes and technologies in support of collaboration on the continent as a whole. This in turn will ensure that African organisations will be better equipped to participate in determining strategies adopted to confront their development challenges.

Description:

The following types of activities are examples of SGF projects that fit within the theme of strengthening existing networks and collaborations in Africa:

- Increasing network coordinators' and members' access to relevant training and support for knowledge - and ICT-related capacity development. This could include, for example, receiving training in the strategic use of ICTs and/or Knowledge Sharing techniques;

- Raising awareness within African networks of the potential for processes and technologies in support of collaboration to strengthen their collective capacity to effect change;
- Undertaking research that can serve as a valuable resource on a variety of techniques, conceptual frameworks, indicators, etc., relating to facilitation, knowledge sharing, communication and other collaboration-related issues such as gender considerations;
- Building expertise in the design and implementation of collaborative processes, including facilitation or conflict resolution/mediation processes;
- To increase the profile as well as knowledge and networking base of Harambee and Harambee partners.

Financial information:

Grants to be awarded range in value from US$ 1,000 up to a maximum of US$ 5,000.

Geographical focus:

Preference will be given to networks with an institutional base in Africa.

ICCO

Background:

ICCO, founded in 1964, is rooted in the Dutch Protestant-Christian tradition and is partner in various national and international ecumenical networks. In 2000 ICCO merged with

SOH (Dutch Interchurch Aid - DIA) and Service Abroad (DOG). ICCO is a co-financing organization, which supports various small project funds all over the world

Description:

ICCO supports small project funds (delegated funds), because:

- It is seen as a way to reach grassroots organizations and small organizations, which ICCO is not able to reach directly due to administrative reasons and geographical distance;
- It is a concrete step in the delegation of responsibility to the regions where ICCO works;
- It could be an instrument in order to identify new Organizations, which could amplify ICCO's network in the region. New Organizations, in the first place supported through small grants funds could grow and become stronger in order to finally be able to receive direct funds by ICCO;
- ICCO sees small grants funds as an instrument in order to analyse the context in the regions where ICCO works. Because of their strong connection with grassroots Organizations and local movements, the funds should have a large knowledge of trends and necessities on grassroots level.

Financial information:

Range of Grants: various.

Geographical focus:

ICCO has most experience in the support to small project funds in the region of Latin America.

International Community Foundation (ICF)

Background:

Established in 1990, the ICF now has assets over US$ 1 million and 36 funds, and is committed to fostering lasting philanthropy to benefit international communities throughout the Americas and Asia in the areas of education, community development, health, the environment and cultural endeavours.

Description:

The ICF is committed to fostering lasting philanthropy to benefit needy communities and non-profit organizations throughout the Americas and Asia.

Thematic priorities are environment, education, health, culture, and sustainable communities.

Financial information:

Grants range between US$ 300 and US$ 300,000.

Remarks:

Since most grants are made upon the advisement of donors, there is no set format or timetable for grant applications. Interested non-profit organizations should send a brief letter of inquiry via email. If the program meets the criteria and goals of one of the funds, a more detailed proposal will be required. For more information: www.icfdn.org/grantseekers/grantseekers.htm

Geographic focus:

The Foundation in particular seeks to increase charitable giving and volunteerism across U.S. borders to benefit non-profit organizations and communities primarily in Baja California, Mexico. Furthermore projects and activities are funded in Argentine and Guatemala, as well as in China. Last but not least tsunami-related projects are funded in Indonesia, the Maldives and Sri Lanka.

NCIV

Background:
The Netherlands Centre for Indigenous Peoples is a NGO that supports indigenous peoples and their human rights all over the world.

Description:
NCIV administers a small grants facility: GRIP: Grants for the Rights of Indigenous Peoples. GRIP aims to provide financial support to small-scale initiatives of indigenous peoples organizations (IPOs) that promote the recognition and implementation of their rights at the local level. The beneficiaries of GRIP are indigenous organizations in the ODA countries (see list above). GRIP will only fund indigenous peoples organisation's own initiatives or initiatives of NGOs that work to organize indigenous peoples who have not yet been able to establish their own organization.

The following activities are funded:

- Local workshops, training sessions and other educational activities on promoting the recognition and implementation of the rights of indigenous peoples in general or Indigenous women;
- Means to map and demarcate indigenous peoples' territories;
- Means to support legal cases on the rights of indigenous peoples, such as the costs for hiring lawyers;

- Means to participate in local, regional and national meetings concerning the rights of indigenous peoples.

Financial information:
The maximum grant is € 10,000.

Remark:

Please, bear in mind that the budget of GRIP is very limited, which means that the more restricted a project budget is, the more project proposals of indigenous peoples can be awarded.

Geographical focus:

New Field Foundation (NFF)

Background:

The Foundation, founded in 2003, contributes to the creation of a safe and sustainable world by supporting women and their families to overcome poverty, violence, and injustice in their communities.

Description:

New Field is interested in supporting an organization or group so that it can realize its goals according to its own needs and priorities. Grants can be made for institutional capacity building, program activities, or administrative support, as defined by the organization or group itself.

The NFF is particularly interested in organizations and groups that:

- carry out their work with integrity and courage;
- enable rural women and their families to re-establish and transform their lives in different ways after years of disruption, conflict and displacement;
- enable rural women and their families to benefit from, control and maximize economic resources;
- encourage women's leadership and participatory processes at all levels;

- create long-lasting peace and non-violence, in the home and in the community;
- influence and implement changes in attitude, processes and decision-making at provincial and national levels in ways that benefit rural women and their families.

Ramsar Small Grants Fund for Wetland Conservation and Wise Use (SGF)

Background:

The Ramsar Small Grants Fund was established by Ramsar COP4 in 1990 as a mechanism to assist developing countries and those with economies in transition in implementing the Convention and to enable the conservation and wise use of wetland resources. The Convention's mission is the conservation and wise use of all wetlands through local, regional and national actions and international cooperation, as a contribution towards achieving sustainable development throughout the world.

Description:

Suitable project proposals are those which contribute to the implementation of the Convention's Strategic Plan 2003-2008 for the conservation and wise use of wetlands; provide emergency assistance for Ramsar sites; or provide 'preparatory assistance' to allow non-Contracting Parties to progress toward accession.

Remarks:

Deadline for applications June 30 of each year. The Secretariat's regional teams also offer an advisory service to help with the preparation of suitable proposals, for which drafts should be submitted to the Senior Regional Advisors by 15 April. Note that emergency assistance projects may be submitted at any time of the year.

Right Sharing of World Resources (RSWR)

Background:

Right Sharing of World Resources is a Quaker organisation with a mission to support grassroots development and economic discipleship through small grants.

Description:

RSWR funds income-generating projects. Proposals MUST outline the economics (expenses and income) of an income-generating project, especially the net income the beneficiaries can expect. A revolving fund must be incorporated into the project and details of its implementation provided. RSWR is particularly interested in funding new, small, grassroots organizations, especially those whose director is a woman.

RSWR's grant-making work focuses on the cultural, social and economic empowerment of impoverished persons. In RSWR's experience this is best accomplished in implementation of sustainable agriculture and/or microenterprise self-employment projects.

Geographical concentration:
RSWR focuses its funding in South India (Tamil Nadu and the districts of Chittoor, Cuddapah, Anantapur, and Nellore in Andhra Pradesh), and Sierra Leone.

Financial information:

Grants are up to $US 5,000 per year (never more!), for a maximum of 5 years. Often, however, 3 years is the upper limit. Proposals should identify the duration of the project. Note: Proposals or proposal revisions by electronic mail are not accepted.

Small Grants Program for Operations to Promote Tropical Forests (SGP-PTF)

Background:

The Small Grants Programme for Operations to Promote Tropical Forests is an European Commission funded initiative implemented by the UNDP and executed by the SEAMEO Regional Centre for Graduate Study and Research in Agriculture (SEARCA). The SGP PTF was established with the overall objectives to implement EU Development policy, based on priority for the poor, working towards sustainable development and integration into the mainstream economy by empowering the traditional forest people and rural poor to maintain, to reintroduce, to develop and practice traditional an novel ways of sustainable forest use.

Description:

The SGP-PTF is a community focused, country-led programme that works closely with and builds on the existing mechanisms and procedures established by The GEF Small Grants Programme. The main objective of this programme is to encourage and support local communities, who often have little access to financial and technical resources to undertake innovative approaches to sustainable forest management at the local level. Additionally, the programme also will enable these people to have a voice in the emerging process of bottom-up natural resources policy formulation, by promoting links and networks between them, and with urban environmental action groups who share their views as well as with official bodies.

Financial information:

The principal thrust of the SGP PTF is the provision of small grants (EURO 20,000 – 200,000) to enable civil society organizations at country level to implement small forest related projects, which promote sustainable forest use by local stakeholders.

Geographical focus:

The program is aimed at South-East Asia (and Sri Lanka).

UNDP/Global Environment Facility Small Grants Programme (UNDP/GEF-SGP)

Background:

Launched in 1992, SGP supports activities of non-governmental and community-based organizations in developing countries. The GEF's Small Grants Programme aims to deliver global environmental benefits in the GEF Focal Areas of biodiversity conservation, climate change mitigation, protection of international waters, prevention of land degradation (primarily desertification and deforestation), and elimination of persistent organic pollutants through community-based approaches. Funded by the Global Environment Facility (GEF) as a corporate programme, SGP is implemented by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) on behalf of the GEF partnership, and is executed by the United Nations Office for Project Services (UNOPS).

Description:

The SGP is rooted in the belief that global environmental problems can be best addressed if local people are involved. At present, 95 countries participate in SGP having ratified the conventions on biological diversity and climate change. The overall SGP project portfolio comprises 60% biodiversity, 20% climate change, 6% international waters, and 14% multi-focal issues.

To be of interest to grassroots communities, projects supported by SGP need to incorporate significant components of sustainable livelihood activities that are not eligible for GEF financing. GEF requires that SGP mobilize funding to match that which it provides, with at least half to be in cash. Over 600 partner organizations now provide co-financing and other support to SGP activities.

Financial information:

The maximum grant amount per project is US$ 50,000, but averages around US$20,000. Grants are channeled directly to CBOs and NGOs.

Geographical focus:

Africa; Arab States; Asia and the Pacific; Europe and the CIS; Latin America and the Caribbean.
